This 8 day advanced program is the most complete and challenging wilderness medical training you can engage in. The WRFR level is designed for Outdoor Professionals who will be managing wilderness activities resulting in advanced medical response. Besides understanding the use of medical gear in the wilderness environment, the program establishes solid rescue interface practices, pharmacology limitations, and students will manage a remote overnight long-term care dilemma.

Completion of this program will give successful participants a Red Cross First Responder course with all the Wilderness issues/ focus and eligible to apply for the NS provincial Medical First Responder qualification. This program will take 8 days to complete and will involve at least one overnight within a trip or excursion that will take place on the back end of the program. Majority of the program will be taught outdoors. Come prepared to be in and stay outdoors given the time of year.

Just a sampling of things to expect:

- Detailed patient assessments
- Search and Rescue Basics
- Long term patient care
- First Response gear in the wilderness
- Environmental Injuries
- An overnight true long term care experience

* Majority of the program is scenario based / experiential *

Survival Pack Contents List

Halifax Regional Search and Rescue has got a standard survival pack to be carried by members while on search.
